Auto-teller

Compass Bank, perhaps best-known for its free ATMs and accompanying clever ad campaign, will unleash its "Fabulous Free ATMmobile" at the Compass Bank Elephant Rocky Cycling Festival at Castle Rock on Sunday, June 6. The customized van will visit festivals, concerts, sports events and elsewhere, and it's equipped with two cash-dispensing machines. Each can handle more than 150 transactions per hour.

Of course, that pace may slow a bit if party animals who are perhaps a bit too deep in their cups try to figure out how to use the machine -- or if they assume they're just lost and don't know how they wound up at a bank.

Ah, romance

Now you can help set a world record while wondering where all the good ones went.

8minuteDating hopes to enter the Guinness Book of World Records by holding the largest speed dating event ever on Saturday, June 12. Denver's contribution will be those who gather at O's Restaurant in the Westin Westminster -- ages 25-40 only, please -- at 1 p.m. It will cost $25 to attend.

In a major burst of optimism, the news release says, "Hundreds of new relationships are likely to begin as a result of 8minuteDating's nationwide event." We hope that's true, but we also predict despair, handwringing and self-recrimination from those who don't meet anyone they'd want to see a second time.

Ah, but 8minuteDating says if participants don't meet someone they wish to see again, their next event is free.

Houston, we have an energy drink

Denver-based Go Fast Sports and Beverage Co. wanted to be the first energy drink in space. So the company sponsored the first civilian rocket launch in May in the Nevada desert.

Go Fast spokeswoman Heather Hill wouldn't reveal how much the company spent on the marketing scheme other than to say, "It was definitely an investment in an historic event."

The launch, conducted by the Civilian Space eXploration Team, has gotten national media attention and will be the focus of a documentary this summer.
